FIGHTING AROUND PORT ARTHUR

British Warships Will Carry Russia's Message to Her Volunteer Fleet Commanding it to Desist from Boarding Neutral Vessels

FLEET WILL AGAIN SAIL FROM PORT ARTHUR.

Tokio, August 26.—Five steamers and three torpedo boat destroyers weighed from Port Arthur yesterday and began steaming away. A two-funnelled torpedo boat destroyer struck a mine two miles off Liao Ti promontory and sank immediately. Five minutes later a second destroyer with four funnels, ran against another floating mine, which exploded. This second vessel was at once surrounded by the other Russian ships and towed into Port Arthur harbor, the entire flotilla accompanying her. The Japanese cruiser Hashadate witnessed the explosions. The actions of the Russians in attempting to clear the harbor of mines indicate that the fleet are again to sail from Port Arthur.

FIGHTING AROUND PORT ARTHUR.

Choofoo, August 26.—The latest advices from Port Arthur brought by Chinese junks indicate that while the Japanese have captured several additional minor forts in the vicinity of Golden Hill, there is no immediate prospect of taking the fortress by storm. The spirits of the garrison have been greatly raised through the practical failure of recent assaults and now it is believed that active operations by the Japanese are for the present at an end, and the usual siege tactics will be used. There is still a fair supply of food in Port Arthur, and by putting the troops on straight siege rations General Stoessel can hold out at least until the beginning of winter. The Russians realize the importance of delaying the capitulation of the fortress as long as possible, in as much as the Japanese plan of campaign against Kurapatkin, which is now suspended as a result of the Port Arthur assault, will be seriously affected thereby. Preparations for winter quarters are already being made by the Japanese. The Japanese losses before Port Arthur were enormous during the four days' assault, and entire battalions have been sacrificed in an attempt to hold the new positions. Men have fought with almost fanatical bravery. The Japanese losses before Port Arthur exceed 35,000 men. The Russian casualties at Port Arthur were at least ten thousand men. The Japanese have secured a great advantage by the capture of Etzshan fort. It is doubtful, though, whether they can hold it against the fire from Golden Hill, which practically commands the position. Etzshan fort is almost in the centre of the chain of forts, of which it forms one, defending Port Arthur, from which it is only about a mile and a half distant. It occupies a commanding position, and is second in importance to the Golden Hill forts.

JAPS MAY PROSECUTE A WINTER CAMPAIGN.

London, Aug. 26.—According to the correspondent of the Daily Chronicle with General Kuroki's army, the Japanese are not likely to retire into winter quarters. Rather than thus give the Russians a breathing space, they will prosecute a vigorous winter campaign. The correspondent says that the Japanese are accumulating immense stores of ammunition and guns at Hai Cheng.

Liao Yang, Aug. 26.—Severe fighting has taken place at a point 25 miles southeast of Liao Yang and apparently a general attack is in progress.

RUSSIA IGNORES PROMISE MADE TO GREAT BRITAIN.

St. Petersburg, August 26.—Great Britain has formally called the attention of the Russian government to the renewed activity of the volunteer fleet steamer Smolensk, and has asked for explanations. Russia has not yet formally replied, being without official information, but in a general way she has explained that the foreign office suggested to the Associated Press yesterday that orders sent to the Smolensk not to stop any more neutral vessels have not been delivered.

BRITISH WARSHIPS WILL DELIVER THE INSTRUCTIONS.

London, August 26.—Replying to a deputation of the East India trade section of the London Chamber of Commerce, Premier Balfour said he had been informed last night by Benckendorff, the Russian ambassador, that his government was not certain that the Smolensk had received orders in accordance with the recent agreement concerning the treatment of neutral ships. Therefore, in accordance with suggestion of the British government, the Russian government had authorized Great Britain to assist in locating and notifying the cruiser. In consequence of this the government has ordered two cruisers from the Cape of Good Hope to proceed immediately to search for and locate the Smolensk and her consort and convey to them instructions from the Russian government to desist from further interference with neutral commerce.

Liao Yang, August 25.—A big battle commenced yesterday twenty miles east of Liao Yang. The Russian front from Taitze river south was engaged. The fighting continues today at Liandianshan, twenty miles southeast of Liao Yang. The Japanese are attacking.

St. Petersburg, August 26.—A despatch from Liao Yang under date of August 25th, says the Japanese eastern forces began a forward movement on August 24th, eight companies going on the main Liao Yang road in the direction of Liandianshan. The Russian outposts held their position. The fighting continued yesterday. The result is not stated, but it is understood the second and 12th Japanese guards divisions are participating.

Hunters From the North

Free Press.

After travelling three hundred miles in an open boat with a load of furs, Jacob Sinclair and Joe Vincent, two swarthy half-breeds arrived in Winnipeg by the way of the Red River and moored their little craft under Louise bridge. As in the pioneer days when the great company governed the land they left the far north and started for Norway house. Setting sail they came along the vast and pictureless shores of Lake Winnipeg and then guided a strong current until Selkirk was reached. From Selkirk to Winnipeg the current which they had both travelled over frequently was too strong for them, and they hired men to tow them to their moorings.

On their return trip they will take with them supplies for the lonely hunters of the far north. They disposed of their furs to the Hudson's Bay Co. and to-day and to-morrow will take in stock for their return. These two men are among the few traders and trappers left in the north and with the Hudson's Bay Co. and three others are the only ones who now make their headquarters at Norway house.

While Jacob Sinclair was making purchases of tobacco at Emma & Pan-ama's store last night he was led into conversation by a reporter to the Free Press. "Tell you about the north," he said. Then eagerly he said: "If I tell you all I know about the country I will be here till tomorrow morning. He eventually was led into telling of an experience that he went through last winter when timber wolves followed him and appeared to him in the vast lone land, only at night, until at last he thought that they were spirits haunting him to death. They did not attack, but filled him with a superstitious dread as he could only half see them in the darkness. He thought they were Indians after his pack and goods, but as the dogs which hauled him and his train over the frozen wild were affected in a manner that no Indian could cause, he got superstitious as he played out. Afraid to sleep, he would keep long vigils, with his revolver and trusty rifle as handy as possible.

It was in the beginning of April, and he was heading for Grand Rapids from Winnipegosis. When turning in for the night, wrapped only in a blanket, he noticed that the dogs were frightened at something. They struggled at their leashes and whined pitiously. He could not comfort them in any way unless he stayed right by their side. He could not keep six dogs close company for the night, so after his vain attempts he went back to his blanket, and thinking that the dogs were disturbed by Indians, he lay awake with his firearms well loaded and handy.

The snow drifted the whole night long, and there on the rolling prairies the silent hunter kept guard. Like a statue he kept awaiting developments, patiently, but none came. Dawn came, cold and dreary through the snow, and the dogs, which had also passed a sleepless night, became quiet. He made haste to get away from the place, believing that there had been Indians or some sinister influence at his side, and without sleep he and his dogs munched it, galled by the sun.

On the second night the dogs again manifested the same dread of something in the bush and howled. Fatigued with the heavy trail and the silent and lonely vigil of the previous night, he again patiently wrapped his blanket about his weary body and feigned slumber. The dogs behaved even worse than on the previous night, and one of them, a huge Husky, broke from the tether, snapping a large chain, the largest he could buy at Ashdown's when he was first in Winnipeg. The dog ran to him and bowered, and then he could see dusky forms. This time his bivouac was well chosen on the highest portion of a rocky island, from where he could see the strange shadows moving about in the drifting snow. Fire blazed from their eyes, and he saw them darting from place to place, but making no noise. On the previous day there were no tracks in the snow, and again he spent a night of horror.

The terrors of the lonely man, with a superstitious dread of something which was persistent, but which he could not connect with anything natural, drove him frantic, and to keep his mind occupied he piled the fire high and fed it for hours. Time and again he was about to fire at the weird looking things which haunted him in his lonely camp miles away from human habitation. With the dogs following his very move, afraid to let him get even a few feet away, he finished the night, and as the morning broke they became quieter.

Weak from exhaustion, both he and the dogs made slow progress, and although the drifting snow started to clear off it was with little heart for their work that either he or the animals proceeded. Fatigued, they stumbled through the snow. The willowy stride and the cheery call no more accompanied the dog trail as it had done in the early days of the trail. Broken in strength his very heart crashed out and willing to surrender to anything, that would bring relief from the terrible tension and that dreadful fear of the unknown Sinclair struggled off his little island which the night before was so full of fearful visions. The ice glare and bloodiness looked black in the dawn light, and then the reason of the dogs' distress became apparent.

Bearing down upon the haunted trail with its tail like the man of the north country, were nine large wolves, their cruel jaws agape with passion for slaughter. Famished eyes fixed themselves on the cowed and terrified dogs and vicious fangs bit off the short, shaggy bits of the wild creatures.

"I was all man then," said Sinclair, his eyes sparkling with excitement as he told his tale with a few late ciners grouped about him admiringly. His hands shot up, the left extended along an imaginary rifle barrel while his tall raw body bent gratefully with the ease and suppleness of a tiger. For the second he was transfixed, a poetic statue of North America hunters of the plains. His jaw was set and he again had "the fire of victory in his eyes. Then with a stride he held up two fingers—"got two of nine," he said,

IN the Manicaragua district in Cuba the best tobacco is usually grown on the hills. A clearing is made on some sunny hillside as a seed plot to secure a natural hot bed for seedlings. The expert tobacco growers select only the lusty, healthy plants for transplanting, and these are carefully tended during their 40 days growth. Invariably secure leaves from a plant that has not been allowed to grow stringy from ripening leaves. I get the choicest leaf from the well-matured plant—for I know from that kind of leaf I make a cigar that will give a delightful smoke with the fugitive odor of roses in it—that is the characteristic odor of my Pharaoh Cigar.

THE GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC

It was certainly a red letter day in the history of Edmonton when the first Grand Trunk train pulled into town. The visit of the Grand Trunk Pacific party is not the building of the railway, but it is evidence that cannot be questioned as to the interest of the Company in Edmonton and the surrounding district; and that is a long step towards the railway. The members of the party were unstinted in their expressions of appreciation of both town and country. They had hoped for the best, but what they saw was better than they had hoped. No doubt the hearty way in which the city fathers took up the work of entertaining the visitors, and the splendid weather and roads, had something to do with the favorable views so freely expressed. The standing of the visitors left nothing to be desired; when they speak, they speak with authority and responsibility. Mr. Hays is generally conceded to be the leading railway man in Canada, if not in America, and Senator Cox is probably Canada's leading financier; while Mr. Allan represented Canada's pioneer and largest ocean transport fleet. Mr. Parent is premier of Canada's second largest province, and Mr. Chipman is head of one of the greatest commercial corporations of the world.

The railway men were of course the centre of interest, and these were no less definite in their assurances that the work of construction between Lake Superior and Edmonton would be commenced early next spring, and pushed to completion as fast as money and skill could do it, than they were in their expressions as to the value of this far north-western portion of the prairie country.

There is not now, and has not been any question of the railway coming to Edmonton. This is most satisfactory to the country which finds its commercial centre in the two towns of Edmonton and Strathcona. The former in any part of the Edmonton district knows now that within a very few years he will find competitive railway accommodation in the present centre of trade for the district. That question may be taken for granted as settled. But that does not settle the immediate interests of the town of Edmonton itself, and especially of the holders of business property occupied or unoccupied. The town of Edmonton covers an area of say a mile by two miles, and railway stations almost anywhere within that area might efficiently transact the business of the district centring here. But the commercial business in Edmonton is transacted on a strip of land lying for less than half a mile along the Main street. This piece of land is the heart and centre of Edmonton, and land values within these limits are fixed on a basis radically different and much higher than those in other parts of the town. These values are given the land because, for one reason, or another it has become the most convenient and generally advantageous locality in the town in which to transact business. Anything that tends to render the transacting of business less convenient in that part of the town and more convenient elsewhere, is bound to injudiciously affect business, and therefore values in the present centre of this town. It is therefore necessary for the security of the business interests now centred in a certain portion of the town, and of the values dependent on these interests, that when the Grand Trunk station comes to be located, it will be located so as to give the greatest possible convenience to the established business centre of the town. It cannot be expected that the railway company will look upon this feature of the case from exactly the same standpoint as the businesspeople whose property will be affected for good or ill. The railway company will naturally look for the cheapest site that will be convenient for their operations. As land near the business centre is naturally of higher price than that further out, the lower price of outside property constitutes a standing bonus to the railway company, to keep away from the business centre. This is a condition which occurs in every town or city under like circumstances. Of course there comes a time in the history of a city after the business centre has become so large and firmly established that it is impossible for a railway company to attract it elsewhere—when a railway company will pay fabulous prices to get into a good business location. Such a city Edmonton hopes to be in a few years. But such it is not now, and never will be, unless due advantage is taken of every favorable circumstance. It is not by sitting down and waiting for the smiles of fortune that great cities are built. While a city is in the formative stage as Edmonton is now, everything depends on the energy and judgment shown by the people in dealing with their opportunities. If the Grand Trunk Pacific station is well located, the future of Edmonton is assured, and if ill located, corresponding injury will be suffered by existing business interests.

What stands in the way of the railway station being located by the company where it would be most convenient for the town is the greater cost of the land convenient to the business centre. It may be supposed that the company would rather locate near the business centre than away from it, but can scarcely be expected to pay out large sums of money merely for the convenience of others, and to enhance the property of others. Under all the circumstances the town would do well in the protection of established business interests to approach the company with a view of securing the location of the station on the site most convenient for and most to the advantage of the established business interests, of the town—and the sooner the better.

WHAT IS THE OBJECTION?

Speaking of the visit of the G. T. P. magnates to Winnipeg, the Winnipeg Tribune says:

"There is no citizen in the west who would not hail with delight the advent of the Grand Trunk railway if we can obtain it under the right conditions."

Just so. Now what is the objectionable feature of the conditions? Is it because the company gets no land grant? It is because of the amount of the cash bonus which it receives? Is it because the provinces or territories are being taxed or their credit used to the value of a cent to secure the railway? Is it because the railway will have a traffic monopoly? Or because the government will not control its rates? It cannot be because of any of these things. Is it because the advent of the Grand Trunk Pacific will remedy an existing condition of railway monopoly that it is so objectionable to the Tribune?

The next shot missed, but they run towards. When I saw they were wolves I was not afraid, and I go on with new strength. The wild looking man, with the face which told of exposure, related his story in his own way. It cannot be imitated with the pen, and the picture he drew of the lone man, the terrified dogs crouching at his heels, the starving wolves making their aggressive dash for the party, the one strange shot on the cold lonely wilderness while all about, the great white silence held but no hope for the superior being. Was worthy of an educated and cultivated mind. Wounded from a period of superstitious dread and awe of the unknown, the hunter asserted itself through his other nature, which even he himself could not understand and in the one second he was again steel, snow and action. The story stopped there. It was strange to the denizens of Emma & Panora's restaurant, and with the rapid questioning the man who spends his life in the lonely wilds of the north, went to the silent traces of God, dropped back to his place and grunted, taking his own turn at seeing strange things. He afterwards visited the Free Press and saw the most wonderful sight of his life. Commercialism was forced upon him, and he grunted again; he was where he did not understand, but with his cool steady eye he showed no fear; it was the march of civilization, and to-day his type is rare—stamped out of existence under the hoof of invention and progress. His kindred spirit passed away and the little sail boat under Louise bridge catches in it two men, struggling in the race, but of a noble, picturesque, hardy and truly cultured type.

The Club Man

As home from the Club he wanders late
 He gently smiles at the wiles of fate
 For he knows the effect of wine and malt
 Is quickly banished by Abbey's Salt.

A night at the club—an unusually elaborate banquet
 —even a "bird and a bottle"
 —ought to be followed by a foaming glass of ABBEY'S
 SALT, next morning.

It cleans the stomach and bowels—stirs up the liver—clears the head—gives snap and vim to the whole system—and sends a man to business as "bright as a dollar."

It makes the clubman, the epicure, forget he has a liver.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt
 Is "the Joy of Living."

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT

A CARSTAIRS MAN

Victim of Accidental Shooting. Is an Old Timer in Alberta.

Bulletin Special Dispatch.
Calgary, August 26.—Last night a dispatch was received from Carstairs stating that E. W. Stone was accidentally shot yesterday (Thursday). Particulars were not to hand, as the Oskaloosa ranch, which is Mr. Stone's home, is eleven miles west of Carstairs. It is not known whether the shooting will prove fatal. Only a brief telegraph message has been received regarding the event.
E. W. Stone is an old timer in Alberta, and has a large number of friends throughout the country. Over a dozen years ago he was proprietor of the only hotel at Canmore. From there he removed to Carstairs, entering into the hotel and general store business there. He is now retired from business of this kind having disposed of the hotel and sold the store to John Musgrove, his son-in-law.

Like the veriest amateur of a prize ring, Jack Munro, of Butte, went down before Jas. Jeffries, last night in the second round.
The fight from the boxing district made such extremely heavy showing that the great throng in the Mechanics Pavilion roundly hoisted him as he proceeded to the referee Grancy against the decision that had been given in favor of Jeffries.

SHORTAGE OF GRAIN

IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES

May cause Great Britain to look to her Colonies for all she needs.

Bulletin Special Dispatch.
London, August 26.—G. Bromhal, Britain's leading crop expert, says that reports as to crop prospects of all foreign countries this season, appear to agree in that their several wheat supplies will be all required for home consumption.
It is quite within the range of probability then, that the two hundred million bushels which the motherland requires annually, may be coming this season entirely from India, Canada and Australia. This is a noteworthy contingency and may cause reflection to the people of Great Britain.

CULTIVATION OF SEEDS

The production of selected seed is a subject of the minutest care on the part of farmers who make a specialty of seed growing. Certain seed growing centres in France and Germany are justly renowned. While certain plants breed true to type when the seed is brought from a region where more favorable climatic conditions prevail, there are others which produce the true type only when raised from seed grown in a higher latitude. Horticulturists and agriculturists are not far wrong when they say that seeds brought from a colder climate produce earlier and better crops than home grown seed. This is the case with the majority of vegetables, and it is partly what has given the German seed-growing industry its reputation. The cauliflower seed Erfurt owes the great reputation it has acquired largely to its Danish origin. Copenhagen is indeed becoming a famous centre for the production of cauliflower seed; the value of the annual export reaches $100,000, which gives an idea of the world's consumption of this vegetable.

The creation of this special industry dates back forty years. A farmer of Erfurt conceived the idea that the moist climate of Denmark should be very favorable to the development of the cauliflower. He requested a Danish farmer to make the first trial, which was a complete success, and since that date the cauliflower seeds of Copenhagen have supplied the wholesale market of Erfurt. At first Danish horticulture derived very little profit from this fact, on account of the agreements made with the German merchants. But by degrees, some farmers undertook this industry on their own account, a strong company was formed, and at the present time America gets 80 per cent of its cauliflower seed from Copenhagen.

This success and rapid progress are due to an intelligent and systematic selection of the types of the plants producing seed, and of the seeds themselves, but especially to the physical conditions, which favor the extraordinary development of these plants and an abundant yield of seed. The seed thus obtained, sold in another country, is found superior to the home-grown seed, even under less favorable climatic and vital conditions, and furnishes products of a splendid and precocious development. But degeneration or loss of strength invariably follows after the first generation, necessitating a renewed supply of the original seed. It is now proven that the peculiar soil in the vicinity of Copenhagen has a favorable influence, because trials made in other parts of Denmark have not been crowned with the same success. The atmospheric moisture of the seashore suits the cauliflowers, the more so because the long periods of drought which check the progress of vegetation do not exist there.

The question of the value and hereditary of these acquired characteristics still divides the scientific world. The biennial and indoor culture applied to cauliflowers evidently modifies considerably the climatic influence, since the strains thus obtained lose in a warmer and dryer southern climate their ancestral superiority in the second to the fourth generation. It is this fact which obliges farmers to annually renew their seed and to send for it to the northern countries.

The Dwarf Erfurt is the strain of cauliflower grown and this is identical with what the Americans call the Snowball or Copenhagen Early. Three types can be distinguished, differing in earliness and in their more or less dwarfed appearance, but each having a special value, either for growing under glass or for outdoor cultivation. It is not a rare thing to see in the neighborhood of Copenhagen fields of twenty-five acres planted entirely to cauliflowers. The seeds, which retain their germinating power for two years, are sown in September. The young plants, transplanted and wintered under glass or in special hot-houses, are put out in the spring. The harvesting takes place just a year after the sowing and it is done just as soon as the different parts of the flower attain maturity; this is an essential point for the value of the seed. The drying of the seed pods, the threshing, and the cleaning of the seed are all delicate operations which are performed several weeks after harvest when the flowers are perfectly dry.

FORT SASKATCHEWAN

EXPECTS TWO RAILWAYS

Town is making Good Progress. New Public School Building Completed

Fort Saskatchewan has been making favorable progress in extension of building and trade this year and is keeping abreast of the growing times in Alberta. While the general prevailing quiet times are noticed here as elsewhere, a busy season is anticipated after harvest. Indications for a good harvest in this locality are very favorable as well as prospects for railway construction work in the near future.

The new brick school on Griesbach avenue is nearing completion and will be occupied about the middle of October, with a staff of three teachers. It is a handsome and substantial structure and does credit to the enterprise of the Fort.

A derrick has been erected behind T. Chambers and company's hardware store and a town bell mounted on it. It will be rung morning, noon and night and in case of fire.

The approach to the ferry landing on the north side has been improved. The Fort now has a policeman of its own.

The vital statistics for Victoria district for the month of July are: births, 63; marriages 8; deaths, 6.

Mayor Short, of Edmonton, accompanied by a party of Grand Trunk Pacific officials comprising Chas. M. Hays, Hugh A. Allan, and Hon. Geo. A. Cox, paid the Fort a flying visit on Thursday afternoon. The prospect of a Grand Trunk Pacific train running through town in the near future is now quite in line.

J. D. McArthur, who has the contracts for grading the C. N. R. line through to Edmonton, passed through the Fort on Wednesday evening. He assured the town that they would have the main line and that it would cross the river somewhere in the vicinity. The right of way is to be cleared east shortly so that busy times are anticipated this fall.

Farmers are busy harvesting and the business men of town are taking advantage of the dull and beautiful weather to enjoy a few holidays camping and shooting.

Yukon Dredging

Yukon World

William Ogilvie, ex-commissioner of the territory arrived in the city Friday evening, in a motor direct from the dredger on Stewart river, which is being operated this season under his direction. His trip was purely upon business, and he returned to the scene of his mining operations on the Whitehorse last night.

In speaking of the work that his company is accomplishing this season, Mr. Ogilvie stated that while they had nothing to give out for publication, they were satisfied with the results being obtained. "We are not complaining, though of course we could do better. The water in the Stewart is very high this summer, and persists in remaining at the flood stage, and makes it bad for us as we find our best values in the low bars, which are difficult to get at at the present time."

Though the work of dredging the river is continuing without interruption, it may be more truly regarded as development work rather than an attempt to accomplish anything marvellous in the way of results, it being the avowed intention of the company possessing the extensive concession on the Stewart to thoroughly prospect their holdings before any additional machinery is required.

The dredger has been moved from the position where it was at work last season, up the river to near the mouth of the McQueen. Half way between the mouth of Clear Creek and the McQueen is a high bar known as Nelson's bar, that was famous as the position where it was at work a good deal even before gold was struck on the Forty-mile, as far back as '88 and '89.

The appliances employed in the old days were confined wholly to rockers, and as the best results were obtained during the extreme low water when a greater portion of the bar was exposed than at any other time, it is thought that something extraordinary may be found when the dredger is set to work bringing up the gravel that can be reached only by an apparatus of the antiquated variety.

About 600 cubic yards in twenty-four hours is the capacity of the dredger now in operation, though the nominal capacity as given out by the manufacturer is about 1,000 cubic yards. In the season of the Yukon territory, or at least this portion of it, from fifty to sixty per cent of the advertised efficiency of a dredger is about all that can be expected of it. Mr. Ogilvie's company will install a second dredger on their concession next season, a mammoth affair which has a nominal capacity of 3,700 yards, yet from which it is thought no better will be obtained than 1,800 to 2,000 yards a day. Even at that rate the possibilities are tremendous in gravel that will average but ten cents to the cubic yard, only one-fifteenth of a cent to the pan, as it would mean a yield of $200 a day while the expense of operating the dredger would be simply covered by $100 a day.

The Canadian Northwest
Homestead Regulations

Any even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Territories, excepting 8 and 16, which has not been homesteaded, or reserved to provide wood lots for settlers, or for other purposes, may be homesteaded upon by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age to the extent of one quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less.

ENTRY.—Entry may be made per the district in which the land to be taken is situated, or, if the homesteader desires, he may, on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, or the local agent for the district in which the land is situated, receive authority for some one to make entry for him. A fee of $10.00 is charged for a homestead entry.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES.—A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required by the provisions of the Dominion Lands Act and the amendments thereto, to perform the conditions connected therewith, under one of the following upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three plans:

(1) At least six months' residence years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased) of any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, reside upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such person as a homestead, the requirements of "go on land" may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If a settler has obtained a patent for his homestead, or a certificate for the issue of such patent, countersigned in the manner prescribed by this Act, and has obtained entry for a second homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent may be satisfied by residence upon the first homestead, if the second homestead is in the vicinity of the first homestead.

(4) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon said land.

The term "vicinity" used above is meant to indicate the same township or an adjoining or cornering township.

A settler who avails himself of the provisions of Clauses 2, 3, or 4, must or substitute 20 head of stock, with cultivate 30 acres of his homestead, buildings in their accommodation, and have besides 30 acres subcultivated.

Every homesteader who fails to comply with the requirements of the homestead law is liable to have his entry cancelled, and the land may be again thrown open for entry.

Application for patent should be made at the end of three years, before the local agent, sub-agent, or Homestead Inspector. Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands, at Ottawa, of his intention to do so.

Information.—Newly arrived immigrants will receive at the Immigration Office, in Winnipeg, or at any Dominion Lands Office, in Manitoba or the Northwest Territories, information as to the lands that are open for entry, and from the officers in charge, free of expense, advice and assistance in securing land to suit them.

Full information respecting the land, timber, coal and mineral laws, as well as respecting Dominion Lands in the Railway Belt in British Columbia, may be obtained upon application to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, Manitoba, or to any of the Dominion Lands Agents in Manitoba or the Northwest Territories.

JAMES A. SMART,

Deputy Minister of the Interior. N.E.—In addition to Free Grant Lands to which the regulations above stated refer, thousands of acres of most desirable lands are available for lease or purchase from railroad and other corporations and private firms in Western Canada.
